Abstract: ...unreliable in terms of spares availability. The ISS program utilizes a distributor to direct source product at reduced cost and to streamline inventory and order management. This strategy exists in other industries (automotive), but has not found a foothold in... ...improves availability. 4. Prices decline as the suppliers go direct to the part manufacturers. 5. Product is located in the factory near the tool. 6 Order management is consolidated, as are shipments, and the web is utilized. Significant cost savings have...

Alerting Abstract WO A1

NOVELTY - Method consists in initiating the transaction for the product or service, customer authorization of the transaction by transmission of an authorization code to the billing computer and fulfilling the transaction if it is approved. A transaction identification code is used for the order with a description of the transaction. The merchant computer does not receive information identifying the consumer billing account.

DESCRIPTION - INDEPENDENT CLAIMS are included for

1. a method of conduction multiple transactions between a consumer and multiple merchants.
2. a billing computer connected to a consumer and a merchant using a network.

USE - Method is for e-commerce.

ADVANTAGE - Method allows consumers to purchase goods and services from online merchants by providing billing information to a third party billing system instead of to merchants. Transactions are secure, anonymous, the method enables multiple consumers to charge transactions to a billing account, set different restrictions for each consumer, and aggregate transactions before charging them to a billing account.

DESCRIPTION OF DRAWINGS - The figure shows an e-commerce system.

ELECTRONIC COMMERCE USING A TRANSACTION NETWORK

COMMERCE ELECTRONIQUE PAR RESEAU DE TRANSACTIONS

English Abstract:

The present invention is directed to a transaction network that facilitates and simplifies purchase transactions between any number of customers and any number of merchants. The transaction network is primarily utilized in the sale and purchase of digital content via a network such as the Internet. The transaction network registers and authenticates customer purchase activities and maintains customer account data including payment information. Once registered, a customer will generally not register again for further purchase activities at participating merchant sites. Additionally, the transaction network provides a single, central authentication mechanism for all participating merchant sites using a single customer identifier and password. Further, the transaction network accumulates purchase information across all of the merchant sites and the ultimate payment processing of those purchase transactions. Payment processing generally occurs on a periodic basis, enabling the accumulation of multiple purchase transactions within a participating customer's account. The network additionally preferably provides customers with centralized, automated services for customer account management, product refunds, subscription management, and multiple purchasing accounts linked to the same payment account.
